

“Rice is something that is very important to the farmer, the farmer’s family, and livelihood. It’s not just food for us. If you just bought Fair Trade organic food for your health and the health of your family, you should know you are getting more than that because you are helping people to construct another world, an alternative for living.”

-Phakphum Inpaen, Thai Fair Trade Farmer

“Now we not only take from the farm, but we look after the environment and the nature. What I have seen of organic farming is what I dreamed of as a little girl. Green fields with a garden and large trees. A place to pick my own food”

-Samriang Inpaen, Thai Fair Trade Farmer

“If we are able to expand the Fair Trade network, we would be a country that is able to place emphasis on the community. We could place more importance on producers and consumers throughout the world.”

-Dhamma Sungsalı, Thai Fair Trade Farmer

“Do you sympathize with the Thai farmer? I don’t want you to sympathize only. I want you to understand where that rice has come from before it gets into your hand.”

-Thanida Saengubon,
Thai Farmers’ Advocate
